Annual Message to the College Community

by Sister Karen M. Kennelly

The well-known and much-cited Dr. Alexander Astin, a professor of higher education at the UCLA Graduate School of Education, addressed the Mount St. Mary's College community at the convocation that opened our academic year. He touched upon some of the findings published in his latest book, What Matters in College? Dr. Astin's research reveals that interaction with faculty is one of the most significant influences on a student's college experience. We honor all our faculty, and their singular dedication to teaching both in and out of the classroom, in this annual report issue of the Mount St. Mary's College Magazine.

Through the generous support of the many friends of the College listed in these pages, we are proud to be able to attract and retain an outstanding faculty. The investment in excellence in teaching at MSMC is critically important to our continued growth — and growth has been a hallmark of our last year.

Our enrollment of 1,843 students in associate, baccalaureate and graduate degree programs represents an all-time high. Overall freshman enrollment was up by nearly 20 percent last fall. Those entering students who rank near the top of their high school graduating classes — and they are many — have chosen a small, Catholic liberal arts college for women over some of the nation's best-known larger institutions offering them admission.

New programs designed to extend the opportunity for a quality liberal arts education to new groups of students account for part of the enrollment surge. The Weekend College, less than two years old, is enrolled to capacity. Working adults travel to the Chalon campus every third weekend to immerse themselves in studies and classwork for up to 10 hours a day. They have an opportunity to earn a baccalaureate degree, majoring in either liberal arts or business. The Associate Degree in Nursing program is also attracting its maximum enrollment, with students attending classes in an evening/weekend time frame.

The College has embarked on an ambitious set of projects: renovation of the Coe Memorial Library at Chalon, and the construction of a new library facility at Doheny. Our goal for state-of-the-art library facilities is a challenging one, but will allow the educational experience at Mount St. Mary's College to take a giant step into the future. More information about the MSMC library project will be shared with you in the next issue of the College magazine.

Despite the economic hard times (not to mention natural disasters) that have plagued Southern California, our endowment has grown to nearly $25 million. Fundraising in support of the library has progressed well. Our requests to foundations have met with an encouraging response, from a lead gift of $5 million from the Thomas and Dorothy Leavey Foundation, to smaller but very substantial gifts from the Weingart Foundation, Carrie Estelle Doheny Foundation, and Ahmanson Foundation. We look forward to enlarging the scope of the library capital fund drive in the near future.

Dr. Jackie Daud, academic vice president and dean of the faculty, with Sister Karen in the main reading room of Coe Library. The library renovation will not alter the vaulted ceilings.

Funding for student financial aid continues to be at the top of the Mount St. Mary's agenda, and a priority for all of American higher education. In light of federal and state cutbacks for support of scholarships, we are more concerned than ever that qualified students have access to a Mount education. Building our scholarship endowment remains a major goal of the College's fundraising efforts.

We are proud of the accomplishments of our alumnae, whose lives and work are so eloquent an expression of the College's highest purpose. Founders Day 1993 recognized two alumnae of extraordinary achievement and involvement with community, Janice McIntyre-Poe '71, and Nancy Reiley Morgan '65. Please give some thought to nominees for this year's Outstanding Alumna Awards, and mark your calendars for the College's annual birthday festivities on October 9, 1994.

For the fifth year in a row, Mount St. Mary's College was named among the top ten regional liberal arts colleges in the West in the annual U.S. News and World Report college survey issue. We have held firm in the number two position (number ONE in California!) for the last two years. Among the criteria used in this ranking of the nation's top colleges are academic reputation and faculty resources.

The MSMC professors profiled in this issue represent a teaching faculty that is the lifeblood of the thriving community of Mount St. Mary's College. As we celebrate their commitment and good work, we have much for which to be proud and grateful. Our deepest thanks go to all of you who have helped us achieve so much.

Virginia Chris Stevens '65 (L) teaches at the English Language Institute at the American University in Cairo. She and her husband Paul recently enjoyed a visit with Alumnae Relations Director Margaret Sprigg Harst '58 (center), who was vacationing in Egypt and the Holy Land.

Dr. Jim Delahanty

Chair, Department of History and Political Science

Whenever his maternal grandfather came to dinner, the discussion topics permitted at the Delahanty table in Trenton, New Jersey, were confined to history and current events. To participate in the conversation, Jim delved into the study of history and politics, the disciplines that would one day shape his career.

Today, Dr. Jim Delahanty serves as chair of MSMC's history and political science departments, a position he has alternately shared with Dr. Ronald Oard for the last 20 years.

Delahanty attended Rutgers University, where he obtained his bachelor's degree in history in 1957, and a master's in political science in 1958. In 1962, he became a doctoral candidate in political science at UCLA; in 1979 he earned his doctor of jurisprudence from Loyola Law School.

Delahanty's wife, Jane, is an MSMC alumna. She recently received her MBA from the University of Dallas Graduate School of Management.

Jim began his career as a part-time instructor at MSMC, and accepted a full-time position in 1961. "I have always enjoyed being in front of a classroom," he says. "For me it's a constant learning process, because I learn what my students are concerned about from the questions they ask."

His favorite among the classes he teaches is constitutional law. "There have been so many changes made by the Supreme Court, especially with regard to the status of women. Each time the class meets there are new and challenging issues to discuss."

"It's easier to live with a bad decision with a good rationale than a good decision with no rationale — which is, of course, a definition of tyranny."

Dr. Marie Egan

Chair, Department of Religious Studies

Marie Egan became a member of the Immaculate Heart Community in 1955, and was deeply influenced by the sisters' vision of what good teaching could accomplish. She earned both her bachelor's and master's degrees in English at Immaculate Heart College, where she subsequently taught for nearly 10 years. Egan was one of the first two women to enroll in the School of Sacred Theology at Catholic University of America in the mid-60s, and holds a doctorate from that institution.

Teaching Christian ethics poses special challenges, Egan says, because students sometimes see it as a study of behavioral expectations, mere rules and regulations. "That can turn them off. But the point is to help them discover what they value, as individuals, and bring that to a conscious level." During her current sabbatical, she will do research in the area of feminist theology and ethics, with plans to develop an upper-division course in Christian feminism.

Egan wants the young women she teaches to understand what they believe and why they believe it. If people respond freely, that becomes the essence of faith. "It has to be free or it's not worth anything," she says.

"We should freely choose what is good for ourselves, for others, for the Church, for God—because we see that it's good, not because somebody told us to," Egan maintains. "It's much more difficult to teach freedom and responsibility than it is to teach obedience."

"You have to have a little bit of the showman about you—we're all hams at heart. But the real excitement in teaching comes from knowing that you are having an impact on students."

Sister Teresita Espinosa

Chair, Department of Music

Sister Teresita Espinosa, born to a musically talented family, vividly remembers how much she disliked practicing piano as a young child. "My parents had the wisdom to introduce me to a teacher who, along with sharps and flats, taught me to love, understand, and feel the music within me," she says. By the time she was 12, she was giving concerts and performing on the radio.

She was sent to Mount St. Mary's College, where she obtained her bachelor's degree in music, with a concentration in performance, in 1959. She began to teach at the Mount and continued her studies at the University of Southern California, where she earned both a master's degree and a doctorate in music education. She has served as the chair of the MSMC music department since 1971.

On an average day, Espinosa's classes range from music appreciation and guided experience in the arts for non-music majors to specialized courses in theory, music education, and history for students who are planning musical careers. "Each class and every student is a new experience. My goal is to inspire in them a love and understanding of music that will always be a part of their lives."

Her commitment to excellence in teaching has led her around the world in search of approaches to the study of music that reflect the multicultural dimensions of the College's student population.

"A good teacher never stops learning. We live in the most ethnically diverse country in the world; we must continually expand curricula to include the riches of our cultures, building on the basic sense of unity that brings us all together."

Dr. Anne Wilcoxen

Assistant Professor, Department of Education

Anne Wilcoxen arrived at teaching after dedicating many years of her professional life to working with children with a wide range of language disorders. She deliberately chose the L.A. public school setting for her work as a speech pathologist, preferring not to be in a clinic. "If you want to be effective and make a difference in a kid's life—aside from being a parent—you have to go where the kids are, and they're in school!"

It was the pre-Proposition 13 era, and Wilcoxen explains that California was the first state to set up classrooms for students with severe language disorders — students who might otherwise have been categorized as brain damaged or retarded. But when funding for what had become a world-class program ran dry, Wilcoxen decided to broaden her view of the many conditions that can put a child's ability to achieve educational potential at risk. She earned her doctorate in educational psychology from UCLA in 1984, and did extensive research on the home lives of developmentally delayed toddlers, and teacher-pupil interaction in special education classrooms.

She joined the MSMC faculty in 1990, and directs the College's programs in elementary and special education. Wilcoxen's background in special education has proven particularly helpful in light of California's new credentialling requirements for teachers who work in bilingual classrooms. "Many of the strategies being used now with limited English students originated with special education—the two disciplines really feed each other.

"My biggest thrill in teaching comes when students see the connection between what we're talking about in class and what they'll be doing in a classroom of their own."

"The kids don't look the same, the chairs aren't in neat little rows. For new teachers, responding to the diversity in today's classrooms can be overwhelming. Our students are learning to create their own teaching reality, experimenting with instructional models that are very different from the ones they remember."

Dr. Brenda Shook

Chair, Department of Psychology

Several models of human and animal brains teeter on overflowing bookcases and adorn the walls of Brenda Shook's office; a painting of a rat's skull hangs in a handsome wooden frame near her desk. The results of a BYOB (Build Your Own Brain) class assignment sit on tables and chairs — brains rendered metaphorically or more literally, in stained glass, in papiermâché, in clay.

She has long been fascinated with the overlap of physiology and psychology; after earning her Ph.D. in physiological psychology at Brandeis University in 1982, Shook did postdoctoral fellowships at UC Davis and UCLA, focusing on neuroanatomy. Her current research examines the impact of injury on fetal brain development.

Shook's sheer joy in the attainment of knowledge is something she seeks to pass on to her students.

"Mount St. Mary's is a place with extraordinary collective dedication among the faculty — devotion to student learning is what we're about," Shook affirms. "Women have so much to contribute in the sciences. What I want to convey to the young women I teach is that with education and skills, they can and will excel — regardless of what the odds are."

"There has been a tremendous explosion of knowledge, new technologies that are accelerating what we can do in science and medicine. But the big question is, still: Are we smart enough to understand our own brains?"

Volunteers

We are grateful to those who have given the gift of time to the College—who have volunteered for FANS (Friends and Alumnae Network System), the phonathon, the alumnae scholarship luncheon, the family picnic; or who have represented the College at inaugurations or spoken at the career panels for students.

Joan M. Cho

Assistant Professor, Department of Nursing

After teaching large nursing classes at a California State University for several years, Joan M. Cho decided that a smaller college community would allow her to make a bigger difference in the lives of her students.

The assistant professor of nursing started teaching at Mount St. Mary's College in 1974, and is well-known for emphasizing the role of critical thinking skills—both in the classroom, and in her students' clinical experiences.

Cho attended Indiana University, where she earned a bachelor's degree in nursing in 1962 and a master's degree in 1967. She also did post-graduate coursework at UCLA. At MSMC she teaches the introductory classes in Roy Adaptation Model Nursing Theory, and nursing practicum courses.

She is one of the contributing authors to the Roy Adapatation Model nursing textbook and its workbook. She also has developed a comprehensive tool designed for a beginning-level implementation of the Adaptation Model nursing process.

"Medical technology is constantly changing, and with the changes come specialized skills. But by encouraging my students to think through solutions, I hope to build an attitude that will be the foundation for their future nursing practice."

"I like to probe a student's thinking process. As nurses, they must constantly ask questions of themselves as they make many critical decisions involving their patients' welfare."

Pasadena Area Community College

Dr. Maurice Hamington

Assistant Professor,
Department of Business Administration

Teaching hasn't always been Maurice Hamington's full-time occupation. After earning his bachelor's degree in business from Loyola Marymount University and his master's of business administration from the University of Southern California, he worked for the American Red Cross and Best Foods, Inc., as a human resource specialist. While teaching in the evenings at Pasadena City College, he began to pursue a master's degree in religious studies at MSMC.

"I found a stimulating camaraderie in the academic community that I didn't find in business," says Hamington. "Encouragement from our own religious studies department, as well as the community feeling created by the students in my classes, inspired me to go into education full-time." That brought him to teaching at MSMC, and allowed him to continue his education at USC. He recently defended his dissertation, "The Renegotiation of Religious Imagery: Mary and Catholic Feminist Ethics," and now holds his Ph.D. in social ethics.

"The environment at MSMC affords unique freedoms, such as creating a new class like my 'Women's Issues in Business and Economics,'" says Hamington. He explains that his young daughter Rosemary has been a catalyst for his interest in women's studies. "Women face unique challenges in the classroom and the workplace. As a teacher, I have the opportunity to help my students find a voice and then learn how to use it."

Hamington's wife, Stephanie, is the coordinator of academic advisement on the Chalon campus.

"I always work to improve my craft as a teacher, continuing to learn from my students as well as my colleagues on the faculty," Hamington says.

"When I begin a class, I like to say 'We're all about to go on a journey together.'"

"I'm constantly being challenged and revitalized by my students' energy in the classroom."

Sister Mary Williams

Chair, Department of English

Her first fall semester as a faculty member was marked by the trauma and tragedy of the 1961 Bel Air fire — a time that Williams recalls vividly. All of her memories of the last 30-plus years in the English department are intensely remembered, fueled by the two-way flow of energy she creates in the classroom.

Williams says continuing changes in approaches to methodology and course content have stimulated great growth in her as a teacher. "I do much more participative learning, so that students really become involved with the subject matter," says Williams, whose literature classes often provide students with their first serious exposure to Shakespeare. "Once they get over being afraid of it, they become attuned to the excitement of recognizing the human truths. They really start to own it," she explains.

Reading and writing are woven into the history of the Williams family. Her parents edited and published a weekly newspaper, The Pasco Herald, which she'd helped out on before going off to The College of St. Catherine. She was awarded a Fulbright Scholarship to France after her graduation in 1952, and later earned a master's degree and her Ph.D. at Stanford; she did her post-doctoral work at Oxford University and Stratford, England.

Williams approaches academe with remarkable relish — serving on many key committees and, recently, chairing the self-study for the 10-year WASC accreditation.

"This is an exciting time for the department, and for Mount St. Mary's," Williams says. "Our enrollment is growing and we're starting to move toward adding a significant component — an emphasis in professional writing. It's a good department, and we are blessed with good students."

"The incentive at Mount St. Mary's for creative growth as a teacher is an enticement that draws a lot of wonderful people to our faculty. We're a small enough community that we can really make our ideas and goals work."

Catherine Lies
1954 to 1993

The MSMC community was saddened by the death of Catherine Lies on December 18, 1993. Lies was a lecturer in the physical therapy department from 1991 to 1993, and served as head volleyball coach in 1989 and 1991.

"Cathy was the ultimate optimist," says Kari Wolfe, director of the MSMC athletics program. "During her more than five years of battling cancer, she always thought of others first, and constantly tried to comfort, inspire, and support other young women like herself."

Lies received a bachelor's degree in physical education at Southern Illinois University in 1977, and a master's degree in physical education at the University of New Mexico in 1980. She continued her studies at MSMC and earned a second bachelor's degree in physical therapy in 1990.

During her illness, Lies generously shared many of her views of life and death with friends. "Each of you has helped me shape my world, my life; each of you is a piece of the puzzle, bringing unique characteristics and spirit to it," she wrote.

She will be remembered for her loving concern for others, and the energy and joy with which she lived her 39 years.

Planned Giving

Mount St. Mary's College
HERITAGE

Planned giving typically evolves out of estate and financial planning and generally requires the assistance of professionals. It is primarily implemented through wills and living trusts; other devices include endowed memorial gifts, annuities, life insurance policies, retirement plans, and charitable remainder/lead trusts. All forms of planned giving provide one or more types of tax deductions; the savings are particularly helpful when appreciated property is donated.

From the 1960s to the present, MSMC has received over $12 million through planned gifts. Especially noteworthy have been gifts made through trusts by Alice and Richard Aldworth and Jose Drudis-Biada.

Planned giving can help you make a larger gift than you ever thought possible while at the same time allowing you to fulfill your own estate and tax planning goals.

To honor and thank donors for remembering MSMC, the Heritage Society was established in 1992.

Find a Need and Fill It!

If you were to ask Helen Reimann Wood '46 for advice about where to focus your philanthropy, she would quickly quote U.S. industrialist Henry J. Kaiser and say, "Find a need and fill it!" That simple yet practical philosophy is exactly what led to the creation of the Donald J. Wood Foundation, and ultimately the Helen Reimann Wood Scholarship at MSMC.

The mother of three sons and a daughter, Wood and her family know what it means to have a need. Daughter Kathleen has been developmentally disabled since birth and, as in most families, great effort has gone into helping the one most challenged. But the Wood family didn't stop there. With their daughter's future in mind, the Woods formed the non-profit Donald J. Wood Foundation, dedicated to helping the developmentally disabled. Over the years, the Foundation has helped many service agencies in a variety of ways.

The Waad family at home in Oakland, California.

In 1988, the Foundation's officers decided to distribute its remaining funds to organizations involved with disabled people. The Woods turned to their alma maters, MSMC and St. Mary's College, where they established much-needed endowments in the departments of graduate study in the field of special education.

Each year at MSMC, the Foundation's scholarship helps fill financial needs for one MSMC student specializing in the education of the developmentally disabled. "The motivation for my commitment to the Mount comes from the fact that I never really left my college," says Wood. "The great friends I gained created a life-long attachment for me. What I learned there, combined with an interest in providing future security for our daughter, has led to a mission that includes many others in our community."
